Memorial Day Services.

Notwithstanding the cloudy conditions and the threatening aspect of the weather, the services in connection with the Confederate Memorial Day yesterday evening brought many people into the streets and numbers from Washington and other places contiguous to Alexandria. As is the case on such occasions, the intersection of Prince and Washington streets was literally packed with people of both sexes and all ages while almost as many were in and around Christ Church yard. The programme which had been arranged by Lee Camp of Confederate Veterans was carried out in full.

The procession started at 5 o'clock from Lee Camp Hall, on Prince street, headed by the chief marshal, Capt. Thomas Perry, and his aids, Dr. D. N. Rust and Mr. George K. Pickett. The Alexandria Light Infantry, which was in the line of march, was headed by a file and drum corps, and R. E. Lee Camp of Confederate Veterans was headed by the George Washington Brass Band. After passing over the line of march the procession drew up in front of the speaker's stand, which had been erected under the trees in front of the residence of Dr. Hugh McGuire, and within a short distance of the monument at the intersection of Prince and Washington streets from which point the Alexandrians left for the South 42 years ago. After music by the band, Rev. W. J. Morton, S. C. V., rector of Christ Church, pronounced the invocation. Mr. K. Kemper, commander of Lee Camp, then, in a few fitting remarks, introduced the orator of the day, Judge R. T. W. Duke, of Charlottesville. For about half an hour Judge Duke enthused his audience by delivering one of the most logical and animating addresses ever heard in this city on a similar occasion. He expressed his gladness at having an opportunity of addressing the people of Alexandria, and among other things said the city was the true type of the serenity and conservation which should characterize the old Commonwealth. The judge gave an interesting resume of the history of the formation of the government, the terms upon which Virginia entered the union, the subsequent issues which finally culminated in the Old Dominion availing herself of the privilege of withdrawing from the federal compact, when it became no longer to her interests to remain a part of it. The judge then pictured the issue which confronted every Virginian at the outbreak of the civil war when any man who should have refused to take up arms in defense of his State would have been a rebel. While the speaker was professing in his praise of those who had fought in defense of their State, he spoke of the gallantry of those who fought on the opposite side, and said they were equally as patriotic, honest and courageous in battling for what they believed to be right. The judge referred to the situation of Alexandria in 1861, the temper of its inhabitants, the feeling among many for a continuance of the union, and their subsequent action when the sovereignty of the State was menaced. In his epitome of the issues which brought on the conflict between the States, the judge called attention to the fact that the abolitionists of the north were the actual rebels, as they were rebelling against the constitution, the laws of Congress and the rulings of the Supreme Court. He also said the Phillipses, Hayses, Beechers, Garrison, Greeleys, Sumners and others who preached the irrepressible conflict took good care to keep clear of the firing line when the dogs of war were turned loose.

Judge Duke was frequently interrupted by applause. At the close of his address there was more music after which flowers were strewed about the monument by Arthur Herbert Chapter, Children of the Confederacy, and the procession moved up Washington street to Christ Church yard. At this point the mound under which a number of Confederate soldiers are interred was covered with flowers, the band played a selection, and the exercises closed with a volley by the Alexandria Light Infantry, and taps by the drum corps.

After the close of the exercises at Christ Church yard and the disbanding of the procession, the Alexandria Light Infantry proceeded to the Confederate Veterans' building on Prince street, where they were cordially received by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Lee Camp. A seasonable collation had been spread, but the boys in blue, in a pleasant manner, refused to be served until the boys in gray had been catered to.

Judge Duke was also a visitor at the building, as was Miss Mary Custis Lee, both of whom were tendered hearty ovations. The latter had previously been accorded an ovation at Christ Church yard at the conclusion of the ceremonies there.

Decoration Day Services.

Every preparation has been made for Decoration Day services on Saturday next, the 30th instant. The services will be of the same appropriate and interesting nature as those of former years. Captain J. V. Davis, the genial superintendent of the national cemetery at this place, has endeavored recently to make the grounds more attractive than they are in their normal condition. While he has in a measure succeeded, he has found it difficult to improve upon the tidiness and taste he has so long displayed in the care of the cemetery. It is ever pretty and always on dress parade. The following will be the programme of exercises:

Assembly.....Bugle America.....Bugle
Invocation.....Rev. G. H. Hunt, D. D.
Hail Victorious Emblem.....Choir
Reading Lincoln's Speech at Gettysburg.....W. P. Graves
Oration, My God, to Thee.....Choir
Prayer.....Pastor Trinity M. E. Church
Freedom's Banner.....Choir
Benediction.....Rev. Dr. Hunt
Salute.....Alexandria Light Infantry
Taps.....Bugle
A cordial invitation is extended to every one to be present and participate in the services. Contributions of flowers will be thankfully received at the cemetery.

An increase of pension to $55 per month has been granted to Mr. Levi M. Huffman, of this city.

Railroad Expansion.

In the light of recent developments, it is an assured fact that not only the Pennsylvania Railroad Company but the Southern also will be compelled at an early day to expand considerably in Alexandria and vicinity in order to meet the steadily increasing demands upon their transportation facilities. The process of double-tracking both roads running out of Alexandria is now in progress, and when that work shall have been completed the depot facilities of both roads will be found too contracted. The Southern, it will be remembered, a year or so ago purchased all the land south of their track from a point west of the National cemetery to Hunting creek, and now have a loop partly around the city on the south. The company also owns property east of the railroad tracks at the south end of Long bridge. The recent purchase by parties who are believed to be agents of the Pennsylvania Railroad of property north and west of Alexandria has led to the belief that that company is contemplating spending a large sum of money south of the Potomac. In fact this much is admitted by the people known to be in touch with the railroad company. Many not natural-born optimists believe this section of the State is about to pass through a marked metamorphosis during the next few years.

Fight at Nottley Hall.

There was trouble Sunday night at the Nottley Hall opposite this city among negro excursionists, in the course of which one man was shot and had to be taken to the Alexandria Hospital for treatment. A woman was slightly cut in the throat, and three men were injured to an extent which required treatment at the emergency hospital in Washington. The trouble is said to have begun with the shooting affair. There was some trouble over a woman, and Charles Danglefield, a special policeman from Washington, who was at Nottley Hall in the capacity of an excursionist, forgot he was outside of the boundary of his jurisdiction, and essayed the privilege of an officer in using his gun. Danglefield was arrested by Special Deputy Sheriff J. K. Seben, colored, who turned him over to an assistant for the moment. When Seben returned he found the prisoner had made his escape. A few moments later the row started in which the men named were cut. This was over a dispute as to which section of Washington it is best to live in.

Mount Vernon Regents.

The regents and vice regents of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association who recently closed their annual council have published a pamphlet containing a portrait of Miss Cunningham, the first regent, and a full history of her life, which is to be distributed as a memorial. They have placed a handsome bronze tablet to her memory underneath her portrait in the South Carolina room. It is inscribed:

"To the memory of Ann Pamela Cunningham, the founder, in 1853, and the first regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association. By her efforts and in response to her appeals the purchase money was raised, and in 1858 the home and tomb of Washington became the property of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association of the Union."

Charter Approved.

Judge Barley in the Corporation Court today approved the first charter applied for in this city under the new law. It was to the Capital Chemical and Manufacturing Company, incorporated. The capital stock is $50,000, divided into shares of $10 each. The objects of the company are to manufacture and sell at retail and wholesale proprietary medicines and purchase and sell formulas, manufacture the same, etc., Samuel E. Tatem is president, Edwin B. Hay, vice president, and Henry F. Woodard, secretary. These with Charles C. Sloan and Ella M. Rille form the board of directors. G. L. Boodie is the local attorney. The charter will now be sent to the Corporation Commission in Richmond which body alone, under the new constitution, has the power to grant charters.

Novel Road Proposed.

Those who are engaged in the industry of making brick and whose plants are located near the southern end of the Long bridge are considering a proposition for the improvement of the road which is the only means of communication between their plants and the bulk of the consumers of brick who live in Washington. The plan is to lay an iron track along the road for the wagons to run on with a stretch of macadam between the rails. The rails, however, are not of the usual type. They are to be broad strips of iron some eight inches in breadth, placed on a strong bed, and with a substantial footing for the horses between the tracks.

Ferry Rumors.

There is no ferry communication between Alexandria and Washington, nor has there been since last Saturday and from present indications there is no likelihood of it being restored in the near future. It is now said that before a double-ended car can be put on the line it will be necessary to remove the bulk of the burned steamer Columbia from the slip in Washington. It is not known when this will be done, as the insurance company has sixty days in which to adjust the loss. In the meantime the managers of the new company recently organized are represented as being anxious to charter boats for the line until two new ones can be constructed.

An Historic Figure.

The old Indian of a pleasant countenance who for half a century stood at the northeast corner of King and Fairfax streets holding a bundle of cigars in his hand seemingly inviting passersby to help themselves, is now the central figure in a flower garden of the premises. Vines are gradually covering the well-known red man who from his pedestal dutifully witnessed so much of Alexandria's history. He is now headless, that portion of his make-up having succumbed to the tooth of Time. The composition of the aborigine is red cedar. Disintegration is in rapid progress, and ere long the ivy vine will have become his winding sheet.

The steamer Dennis Simmons arrived yesterday from Williamston, N. C., with lumber for Smoot & Co. and H. K. Field & Co.

Personal.

Judge R. T. W. Duke, the orator of the day at the Confederate memorial observance yesterday, was the guest of Capt. K. Kemper, while in the city.

Mrs. Wm. W. Walker, who spent the past few months in this city, has returned to her home in Clarke county.

Miss Edith A. and Blanche G. Stansbury, who have been attending the Valley Seminary at Waynesboro, Va., are expected home tomorrow. Miss Edith A. Stansbury is among this year's graduates of the Valley College.

Confederate Memorial Day will be celebrated at Leesburg on Thursday. Miss Mary Custis Lee will be among the visitors. Mr. William Kilgour, of Rockville, Md., will deliver an address.

Mr. Robert Turner, a flagman in the passenger service of the Southern Railway, was paralyzed while on duty on a train last night. Messrs. F. J. and C. B. Paff, of the Paff Shoe Company, left today for the north, where they will purchase material for the manufacture during the summer of their fall and winter stock.

Deaths.

James Downey, who was recently taken to Providence Hospital, in Washington, for treatment, died in that institution last night. The deceased had been in ill health for some time and recently had been a victim of paralysis.

William Nash, son of the late M. H. Nash, died in Providence Hospital last night. The deceased had been a sufferer from typhoid fever. He leaves a widow and several children.

The Purposed Loop.

The material for repaving from Printer's alley, on Fairfax street, to Prince and from that thoroughfare to Royal street is being placed on the ground. The cement arrived today and was stored in the cellar of the building on the southeast corner of Prince and Fairfax streets. The work of tearing up the cobblestones was commenced on Fairfax street this afternoon.

Attempt to Start a Fire.

About the time the procession was getting under way yesterday evening fire was discovered in the old carriage shop in the court bounded by King, St. Asaph, Cameron, and Pitt streets. The blaze was extinguished by people living in the neighborhood before the engines went into service. The building has been set on fire several times in the past two or three weeks.

Still Catching Shad.

Gillies are still catching shad a short distance below Alexandria. The fish are plentiful in certain places in the river. They are not in good condition, however, being soft or spongy. A few people are still at Fishtown. They are mostly packers engaged in finishing up the season's work and making preparations to vacate.

Improperly Fined.

In the appeal of the Robert Porter Brewing Company from the decision of the Mayor of Danville, who fined it for selling liquor in a "dry" district, Judge Saunders has decided that the company was improperly fined, and that ended the case.

Postponed.

The excursion of the Relief Hook and Ladder Company advertised to take place tomorrow has been postponed to a future day, due notice of which will be given.

Reid this evening, the proceeds of which will go towards the restoration of old Polish Church. In addition to music and refreshments there will be strawberries and flowers from Mt. Vernon; also a supper party. The public is cordially invited.

GREATLY ALARMED

By a Persistent Cough, but Permanently Cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. H. P. Burbage, a student at law, in Greenville, S. Mr. Burbage, having seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised, concluded to try it. Now read what he says of it: "I soon felt a remarkable change and after using two bottles of the twenty-five cent size, was permanently cured." Sold by Richard Gibson.
